ANNOUNCEMENTS. BROADWAY THEATER

The French stage is in many re-spects the foremost stage in the world, and it has been said that on the French stage a woman seldom attains any great measure of success until she has approached her 40th milestone. If this were true of the stage from which Mimi Aguglia comes she would have some seventeen weary years before she could hope for any great accomplishment. That, at the age of 23, she has accomplished the critics of Europea and astonished the critics of Europe and America must prove that she had by lature what the majority of French rtists must accumulate by long years f training. That she is wonderfully ifted is everywhere acknowledged. and within a very short time American andiences will have a still better opportunity to judge of her calibre, since before another year dawns she is to foreske her own tongue and ap-pear in English. The first local ap-pearence of this new celebrity will be made at the Broadway theater on Thursday evening, March 4, when she will nortray the hectic heroine in "Za-

CHILD BURNED TO DEATH. Little Brookfield Girl Stamped on

Lighted Paper, Julia, the 2 year old child of Mr. and Mrs. John Bielnczyk, who live in Brookfield, was frightfully burned on Wednesday while playing with a paper that she had lighted in the kitchen stove, and died later in the hospital in Daphure.

The child was alone in the room at the time, and when she saw the paper ablaze she threw it on the floor and tride to stamp it out. Her dress caught fire and before the mother reached her the child's clothing had been burned off and her body scorched from the kness to the head. Realizing that the child was in a serious condition and mable to procure the services of a unable to procure the services of a physician nearer than Danbury, the father and mother wrapped the little sufferer in soft clothes and drove to Danbury with as much haste as they could. She used to know a girl that knew a girl that he went with
An' broke off the engagement, an' I think her name was Smith,"
"Marconi," pa went on, "he is Italyun by his birth.
An' he got up this wireless, an' I don't know what he's worth!

"You see, they have it on the ship; a little house on top.
That's illied wifh wires an' plugs an' things—that is the wireless anon. The operator pounds the key an' that sends out the waves
That summons help an' snatches folks from gapin' ocean graves."
"How cure an' splendid!" ma declared, "It ought to bring him fame.

I just can't think who that girl was but Smith was not her name."

"You see," pa says, "the air is full of herizian currents now, an' other waves that run around in criss-cross style, semehow.

An' when the operator lifts the key it starts om out an' they go whizzing everywhere for miles and miles about."

"O, isn't science wonderful?" ma mays, "Just think what one man does! It's strange I can't remember what the name o' that girl was."

"An' when the wireless waves go out."

PA says, "they keep right on they find a wireless wire by which their strength is drawn.

An' so they click the other key—it mey be swful far—
But right down—an' there you are.

"Just think," ma says, "why years ago we'd not believe 'twas as.

It's strange that I've forgotten who and what that girl was, though."

"Of course" pa mays, "it's unseen force that circulates all round.
An' what it is or whence it comes ne one has ever found—"
Ma jumped up with a start an' them also sat right down again.
An' sighed: "I had her name, but you mide me forget it then!"
Pa picked his paper up an' ecowied, an' ma's voice told her pain.
When she said: "Henry, I thought you was goin' to expisin."
